Bogs Footwear Review

For my daily commute I wear some Shimano shoes with the cleat embedded in the sole so when I am not on my bike I can walk around without sliding and slipping, but cycling shoes are not the most comfortable for walking around. The soles are stiff which is good for riding, but not so much for walking.

When running errands or washing my bike, I typically wear some old running shoes, but they have no defense against water. Thus, when finished splashing water around everywhere my shoes and feet are soaked. I have also dropped a tool on my foot before while making some repairs which led to me hopping around like a cartoon character for a minute.

Thanks to the fine folks at Bogs footwear, I now have a pair of boots that are perfect for washing and maintaining my bike, along with running errands. I was sent a pair of their Jamison model to review. There are two colors, this colorway . . .

. . . and the all black version that I requested.
